An editorial writer pleads to St. Nick

By STEVE GARDNER
City Editor

Dear Santa:
All I want for Christmas is to be an experienced editorial writer.

This has been an interesting semester. Santa, I have realized how irate some one can become when their views are exposed. The important things, the things I thought would get responses, never did. I only got one response to my gun control editorial and none in response to my support of the electoral college or on my attempt at humor with deer hunters. It can't be that people don't care about important issues, can it?

I didn't think freshmen would get mad—I knew they would. Some of the letters they wrote were hilariously well written. Santa, However, if I could have one other wish, I would like people who can't seem to swear at me. I received about eight phone calls at home—six were against me, and two were favorable. One of them swore at me, and another one swore at my mother. That's not important. I just need the time to write my opinion; if it meant that much to them they should have taken the time to do the same.

I wrote an editorial hoping to cast a favorable light on ASBYU, but made some major mistakes. I mentioned someone's name who never should have been brought up again. I apologize for that one, Santa. I also didn't even mention my name in my letter to the editor of this year's student government officers. They both sounded like cheap shots, and that wasn't intended.

The dance committee thought I was calling their dances "crummy." The letter was intended for those who believed ASBYU was worthless and associated the word "dances" with the word "crummy." The dances aren't bad—they're fine.

ASBYU is a good organization and is led by good people. They make mistakes just like we do.

Some of my editorials did not run. That didn't bother me. I supported voluntary school prayer. It took a lot of time to form an opinion on that one, and when I finally did I only got one response. My gun control editorial did not run in response to my support of the electoral college or on my attempt at humor with deer hunters. It can't be that people don't care about important issues, can it?

I knew beforehand some of my articles would not run, like my review of the Elton John concert two months after the concert and my supporting the re-election of Ronald Reagan.

The criticism is sometimes fun. Someone said my handgun editorial was an "illegal pile of garbage." I think the gun control editorial was a "pile of garbage," even though I heard you're carrying one now in your sleigh. The letters to the editor about on-campus housing were fun. Writing the editorial was fun, too. Some people who wrote to me were nice, others were not. I met a guy who dropped a bowling ball out of his window. I was there this year when a fire alarm was pulled, and jamming doors with pennies is an old one.

I have a confession to make. I've never lived in the dorms. BYU was always a place I planned on going to after my mission; therefore I never had the on-campus experience. I did a couple of things that I'm not proud of for doing what they do, because had I been here as a freshman in 1980-81, I would have done the same stuff.

By the way, my apartment is clean, but I would agree that some off-campus apartments look like Detroit did after the World War II.

If I could, Santa, I would give some tips to those interested in writing editorials.

1) Don't expect any letters supporting your arguments. People, in general, do not like to argue.

Although I had many people tell me my editorial about on-campus housing was truly one I wrote a letter supporting off-campus housing, and that was after off-campus housing became legal.

2) Take your telephone number off the directory. The phone calls at midnight from people who have nothing more intelligent to say than "I'm very glad" are annoying.

3) Be ready to have people who think they know everything about everything come up to The Universe and talk to you for hours upon hours.

4) Learn how to explain to people who don't have time to discuss your editorial and that the best solution is to write a letter to that editor.

5) Before writing an editorial, make sure you have a good argument. In my sophomore year there were some large mistakes in my ASBYU article was because of a lack of sufficient research.

P.S. I'd like to add some other thoughts. I don't think freshmen are less than human beings. That was an intended exaggeration to go along with the on-campus housing ads. Granted the dorms are a bit too rowdy for my taste, but freshmen are decent individuals, except for the ones who called me.

2) I think dorms are all right for some people, just not for me nor for the majority of those who have advanced beyond 32 credits.

3) I think ASBYU is a good organization.

9) I think ASBYU dances are good.

5) I think Scott D. Pierce has the right to voice political opinions, even though he was the sports editor this semester. He knows more about politics, government and history than most people on this campus.

His being sports editor does not mean he is uninformed on world matters.

6) I think Communications 521 (Opinion Writing) is a great class for anyone who wants to learn how to write an opinion article. If nothing else, it gave us the chance to print editorials, and our gut feelings told us whether a certain part of a certain editorial should have been printed. I have actually felt real pride in myself for at least one thing I wrote this semester.

I do have one request from the editorial page editor, Rod Christiansen. Help him make it through the pile of letters to the editor as a senior graduate. Poor guy. I caused him a lot of work.

I do have one more request, Santa. If you ever see ASBYU Organizations Greg Pyper having trouble starting his car, offer him a hand. He's a good man for me once, he deserves a favor in return.

Santa, these next four months, when I'm not here at BYU, I want to not forget the country. I've been reading editorials over the "Y"—Where I get half. Make sure there are more things to write about. If you can, see if you can find people who will care about important issues, like the treasury department's new tax plan, our involvement in Nicaragua, Utah's creditworthiness, school prayer, the federal deficit and religion in politics.

Sincerely, — Steve Gardner

Hijackers in Kuwaiti surrender after attack

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Iranian troops stormed a hijacked Kuwaiti airliner at Tehran airport Sunday night and the four hijackers who had threatened to blow up the plane, themselves and their hostages surrendered, the Associated Press reported.

The Islamic Republic News Agency said the hijackers and the seven remaining hostages, including two Americans, walked down the landing strips of the Kuwait Airway jetliner with their hands raised in the air.

The attack ended the hijacking that began last Tuesday. During the siege at the Tehran airport, the hijackers killed two American passengers and one crew member. All the passengers and crew that had been on the command center plane.

They had released all other hostages earlier Sunday at Michael Jackson's insistence saying they would wire the plane with explosives and issuing a "last warning," IRNA reported.

It said the air pirates told the control tower that they were saying their final prayers and would blow up the plane with everyone aboard if their demands were not met.

The hijackers then broke off radio contact, said IRNA, monitored in Niocia, Cyprus.

It quoted the newly released hostages as saying there were several hostages left aboard, two Americans, one Briton said to be the pilot, and four Arabs, believed to be Kuwaitis.

The hostages freed before the raid believed the hijackers would blow up the hijacked plane "because they prepared everything."

Reagan wants support for program reduction

WASHINGTON (AP) — President

Reagan hopes to build congressional support for his proposed budget reduction by arguing that last month's budget returns translate directly into his plan to freeze, reduce or eliminate almost all domestic federal spending.

"In the coming congressional elections, the people made clear that first and foremost, they wanted to continue policies that would assure strong economic growth," Reagan said during a meeting with reporters Friday.

"So the people voted against tax increases, and they were right," Reagan said. "And they voted against wasteful government spending, and they were right."

Now Reagan and his senior advisers are moving to convince legislators that they can stand to take the strong medicine of cutting back on programs without losing total federal spending for the 1985 fiscal year that begins next Oct. 1 to current levels.

Major new ski resort begun in Utah's Dixie

By STEVE REIHER

Utah State Writer

Northern Utah has long been known for its prime climbing conditions and famous resorts. Now, the southern part of the state is also making a bid to become a major destination for ski enthusiasts.

Ground-breaking ceremonies were conducted last summer for Crystal Mountain, the state's newest ski resort, located near Parkview and Cedar City in southeastern Utah. The resort will cost about $400 million and take 10 years to complete.

Crystal Mountain is located almost adjacent to the current Brian Head ski resort, which is able to ski both resorts, using a single ticket, using a system of lifts and gondolas, to begin with the resort.

When finished, Crystal Mountain will cover approximately 750 acres. Together with Brian Head, the two resorts will offer a total of 11 lifts, including two gondolas, and will accommodate over 6000 skiers per day.

Original plans called for the gondolas to be converted this winter, allowing skiers to sample some of the terrain this winter. But delays in getting approval for some phases of the construction will force the development to wait until early next spring to begin.

Crystal Mountain is being developed by Alpine Resort Investments of Cedar City. Brian Head, recently purchased by the first, he thinks the resort will become one of the finest in the western U.S.

"In size we will become, in comparison with Brian Head, the second largest resort in the country," Ferderer said. "But in quality, we will be one of the nicest in the entire West. Crystal Mountain will be right up with Deer Valley, Sun Valley and Vail."

Ferderer discussed several factors which he believes will make Crystal Mountain a quality resort.

Its best quality is its beautiful setting, said Ferderer. "We are close to four national parks and a national monument, and almost adjacent to a new wilderness area. The natural setting is outstanding."

The resort is located on the west side of Navajo Ridge, next to Cedar Breaks National Monument and the recently completed Mountain and the White Rim Road.

Ferderer said they have taken steps to preserve the natural setting. This includes clustering all the buildings within them or on the slopes, rather than in meadow or stream areas.

"All parking will be underground and even pedestrian paths will be to avoid disturbing the surrounding terrain," he added.

Connected to the village by the sky bridges will be condominiums. "Each condo will be built to interface with a deck or a complete balcony," Ferderer said. "Room service, business and emergency communications will connect to every room," he said.

"Ferderer said one of the biggest challenges will be to keep the heat down with the facilities in the summer. "That's why we are developing a four-season resort," he said.

"Crystal Mountain is in close proximity to the San Joaquin market, southern California," Ferderer said. "We are four hours closer to Los Angeles than the other Utah resorts, and that is a big advantage."

"We also have people say they'd rather drive up here than go to Mammoth and fight the long lift lines," added.

Ferderer said the residents of Cedar City are very receptive of the project. "They understand that this will be good for the economy and at the same time, won't impact too negatively on the environment. We showed them that we were in the natural setting into consideration."

Even the Brian Head owners believe Crystal Mountain will help their own resort, by making the entire area more of a destination point, he said.

Holidays pose photography problems

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Christmas is one of the best times of the year to capture snapshots of family and friends, but special lighting problems sometimes go with yuletide pictures.

The problem with shooting color photos of a lighted Christmas tree, the exterior of a home or a community nativity scene, for example, is often too little light. Snow scenes, on the other hand, can prove too bright.

High-speed film offers a better solution than a flashlight to the low illumination problem, according to many photography programs.

"In most holiday scenes, the light is an important part of what you see," says Robert Harris, professional photographer and instructor for Eastman Kodak Co.

"Flash often overwhelms or replaces the existing light and changes the picture. To avoid that, try a high-speed film such as Kodacolor VR 1000, which will allow you to take hand-held pictures without using flash.

However, brightly-lighted scenes in snow can sometimes fool automatic cameras because the exposure meters often "read" the light from the snow rather than the light actually on the main subject, he says.

"If you can set the exposure settings on your camera, overexpose slightly to compensate for the strong light."

Since Christmas Eve is a time to discover a malfunctioning camera, the batteries that power the flash, meter, exposure and/or film advance should be checked beforehand. Other tips to improve holiday snapshots:

Keep an eye on the background of your pictures so candlesticks, Christmas trees and other objects don't appear to grow magically from your subject's head.

Scrooge was winner from start

On Christmas morning, 1843, a window flew up in the second-floor flat and one tenant cried to a small boy, "What's today?"

"Today? Why, Christmas Day."

"Christmas Day," exhorted the wan-cheeked, needle-nosed old man. "I haven't missed it after all."

At almost the same hour on that very same morning, a smiling young man leaned out to greet the small boy. The morning mail brought the jubilant news that "A Christmas Carol," the ever-delightful classic by Charles Dickens' ghostly conversion, had sold out all 6,000 copies on its first day of publication. The second and third editions were already on the presses.

At 31, with little formal schooling but with "Pride and Prejudice," "Oliver Twist," and "Old Curiosity Shop" already behind him, Charles Dickens was at the height of his creative powers.

"The Carol," as Dickens always referred to it, was written in less than a month to satisfy his creditors.

Old-fashioned spirit displayed in Provo

By LISA REESE
University Staff Writer

The old-fashioned spirit of Christmas in downtown Provo can be seen in the decorations of homes of residents and the "mild sound of 'ho, ho, ho'" from the chubby man dressed in red.

The Provo Area Chamber of Commerce and Downtown Provo Merchants Association are sponsoring several festive events for this holiday season.

These activities vary from the extensive downtown lighting displays to musical numbers for local shoppers.

Pat Louder, the Provo Chamber's administrative assistant, said, "The chamber and Division of the Chamber contributed money again this year to the city for the purchase of new lights and replacements for the annual lighting program."

The program, which started several years ago, was begun by the Civic Improvement Division of the Chamber of Commerce, began an effort to obtain lights to decorate the trees that were part of the city beautification program.

As stated in the Chamber's Old Fashioned Christmas Tabloid, "In 1983, the management of Provo Town Center and the Provo City Council put their money where their mouth was on their commercial buildings, including the historic storefronts on Center Street and University Avenue."

The city power department agreed to help with equipment to string the lights, while Provo Town square provided the labor force and materials."

As in previous years, candlelight processions will lead to Tabernacle Park, and from there the lights were turned on for the first time this year.

For this year's Christmas festivities, Provo Town Square has added a new twist to the lighting displays on Center Street, and the entire rear areas of the complex will be lit.

Another celebration of lights will be held on Dec. 15 in the "Christmas Lighting Contest." This contest, which is sponsored by Provo Parks, is to encourage Christmas spirit throughout the community.

Activities will include Christmas music being performed for downtown shoppers. Through the holiday season, the downtown Provo merchants will have carolers, choirs, BYU performing groups, mime teams, string quartets and church choirs.

The double-decker British bus, which was bought last year by 10 local business people, is also adding to the area festival.

This double-decker bus is a Bristol model "doublek" which is about a foot longer than a standard bus.

Children may also take part in the Christmas celebration by entering a Santa Claus coloring contest. The winner will receive a $25 shopping spree.

Service and giving bring the true spirit of Christmas

By JONATHAN AIKELE
University Staff Writer

With "The World is our Campus" as its motto, BYU has a lot of good will to spread to its student body during this holiday season, and it seems to be doing just that.

BYU's American Indian services has participated in a Christmas program annually for the past five years. William Kelly, assistant director of Indian Services, said, "We have been providing toys, food, clothing, and other gifts to Indian reservations for the past five years."

"The gifts are donated by different businesses and individuals in this area. We have given scripts to the Indians who will act them out for Indian families," said Kelly. This year the Indian Christmas program will donate between $5,000 and $7,000 to needy Indian families in reservations across the United States.

The Christmas program has developed to the point that now the American Indian Services Department is receiving requests from as far away as South Dakota, Kelly said. "We received requests from Indians in Utah, Arizona, Idaho, Oklahoma and even from Rapid City, S.D."

This year we have enclosed a Christmas script along with the other gifts. The script will help the Indians to put on a Christmas program with Joseph and the others," Kelly said. "It is important," he said. "We want to see them get involved in the Christmas story and feel the true meaning of Christmas."

Kelly, who is from Hawaii, takes his wife and seven children on a tour of seven different Indian reservations during the holiday season to show the Indians how Christmas is celebrated in the Islands. "It shows my children the true spirit of Christmas and it is important to give rather than receive," he said.

Another of the service-oriented projects at BYU during the holiday season is set up by the ASBYU Community Service Office, the program director for the "Sub-for-Santa" project.

Hates said, "Sub-for-Santa has two purposes: to help people who live in the Utah Valley community and to give the volunteers a feeling of joy that will encourage them to want to serve for the rest of their lives."

Even though the United Way is in charge of the program, Sub-for-Santa is a tradition that has been at BYU for close to 50 years. Many students may not even know that the service project they are involved in has been here for so long. It was a part of the Sub-for-Santa program. "I would say 70 to 75 percent of the BYU students have participated in the program," said Bates.

Bates said that the Sub-for-Santa program does not accept volunteers under 18 years old. Many of the students who come to participate try to hold off for Christmas, and so we set the sign-up deadline for Dec. 14."

The ASBYU Student Community Services Office has initiated "Project Uplift," a service project aimed at LDS servicemen who may need a joyous bundle to lift their spirits while stationed abroad during the Christmas season.

Jane Treaswell, a sophomore majoring in mental health, is in charge of Project Uplift this year. "Our goal this year was to make the packages more personalized by enclosing a cheery note and the return address of the sender," said Treaswell. In the past any thank you notes have been sent to the ASBYU Community Service Office.

"With the changes we have made, those who don't get a package will receive a reward, rather than the note," said Treaswell.

This year there is an expected 100 percent increase in the number of packages over last year. "Our response has been fantastic. Approximately 800 to 900 students have participated in Project Uplift."

Project Uplift was started during the Vietnam war. The packages of non-perishable food and personal items are provided by volunteers, and the cost of mailing is provided by the ASBYU Community Service Office.

One of the service-oriented projects that come out of BYU originated with Lon J. Wallace, assistant professor of industrial education. Wallace, who was the first faculty member to teach building of wooden toys for the benefit of the Primary Children's Hospital, in Salt Lake City.

"This is an annual event which we have done for 12 years with the United Way. He instigated the project and builds 350 to 400 wooden toys with the help of the student chapters of the National Association of Home Builders of America and the Associated General Contractors of America," said Wallace. "We get lumber from furniture stores or lumber yards or wherever we can. Everything is donated," said Wallace. "We had about 25 to 30 students work on making the toys. Many of them never brought their drilling or saws and they helped assemble and marked patterns."

Wildcats whip Cougar cagers 87-79 with second-half spurt

Cougar forward Tim Saarinen shoots over Weber State's Charles Carradine in action during Saturday's game in Ogden. Saarinen scored 29 points in the contest but the Cougars dropped to a 1-3 record with a 87-79 loss.

There's reason for hope, but cagers are in trouble

Although the BYU basketball team has won only one of its first four games, there are some hopeful signs for the rest of the season. But unless some changes are made, the Cougars — and their fans — are in for a long year.

At the top of the "hopeful signs" list is the play of one veteran and several newcomers. Like Devin Durrant last year, veteran Tim Saarinen is carrying more than his share of the load this season. Through four games, he's averaging 26 points.

Newcomers Alan Pollard, Andy Toolson, Tom Goeting and Jeff Chatman have all been pleasant surprises.

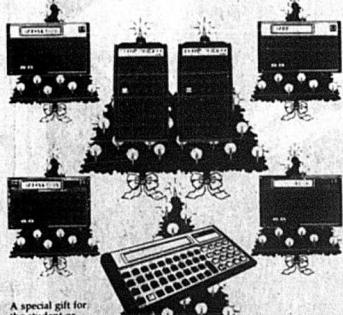

But unfortunately, it's difficult to figure out exactly what the heck BYU is doing. The only thing that appears certain is that Saarinen and Scott Sinek will play most of the game — no matter how well they're performing.

Other than that, the Cougars look like they're playing musical chairs. Only four games into the 1984-85 season, it's already looking a lot like 1982-83.

In Frank Arnold's last year as BYU coach, half the action was players running on and off the court. Players complained of not knowing who they'd be teamed with from one minute to the next and confusion during the game.

OGDEN — For the third time in four games, lack of experience cost the BYU basketball team as the Cougar fell to Weber State 87-79.

Leading 54-49 at the second half, BYU inexplicably seemed to come apart. The Wildcats outscored the Cougars 12-5 in the next few minutes to take a 61-60 lead — a lead they never relinquished.

"I think we played a good ball game — it's just that we didn't play 40 minutes," said BYU senior forward Tim Saarinen, who had 29 points and 22 rebounds. "We didn't maybe 34 or 35 minutes of good basketball and another five or six minutes that weren't so good."

"We lost it in the middle of the second half," said sophomore center

Tom Goeting, who ripped down half of BYU's 22 rebounds. "They got some uncontested shots and the momentum went their way."

As Weber State forged into the lead, BYU appeared to lose its composure. In addition to defensive breakdowns, the Cougars were forcing — and missing — outside shots.

"We just had five minutes when we broke down on defense," said senior guard Scott Sinek. "It got to the point that I started to foul and they just didn't miss."

Down the stretch, the Wildcats put on a free throw-shooting clinic. Weber State hit 20 of their last 22 attempts, putting the game out of reach.

Although the Wildcats came into the game as big favorites, the contest was extremely close until the five-

WANT INSTANT RESPONSIBILITY?

Being a missile launch officer in the Air Force is an awesome responsibility. But it's rewarding with leadership opportunity from the word "go."

The Air Force ROTC can help you prepare for this exciting field by granting two, three or four one-half year grants to education. These will pay for tuition, books, and lab and incidental fees, and give you $100 a month for some of your other college expenses.

Then, if you can qualify for the missile field, you can work on an advanced degree through the grant continuation program.

If you're the type who's looking for an exciting future, a future of commitment and pride, look into this. See if you qualify.

Redskins take NFC East lead

By THE WASHINGTON PRESS

The Washington Redskins took sole possession of first place in the National Football League's NFC East Division with a 30-28 victory over the Dallas Cowboys Sunday while the New York Giants and the Los Angeles Rams broke O.J. Simpson's rushing record for a season.

With their big showdown victory over the Cowboys, the Redskins clinched about three weeks in the divisional NFC East with a 10-5 record and dropped Dallas into a three-way tie for second place with one game remaining for all in the regular season.

The Cowboys fell to 8-7 with a same-day win over St. Louis and the New York Giants. The Cardinals kept their play-off hopes alive with a 31-21 victory over the Giants.

The Rams can win the title outright with a victory over St. Louis next Sunday. The Cowboys play at Miami on Monday night and the Giants host New Orleans on Saturday in their final games.

Washington running back John Riggins, hospitalized with a bad knee six days ago, rushed for 111 yards, including a 1-yard smash for a fourth-quarter touchdown to key the Redskins' victory.

Meanwhile, Dickerson rushed past Simpson's NFL single-season record of 2,003 yards when he ran for 215 yards in the Redskins' victory. He also downed the Houston Oilers 27-16 and kept their postseason hopes alive.

Dickerson, the second-year pro out of San Diego State, finished his regular season total to 2,007. The Rams' 10-5, can gain a wild-card berth in the playoffs if they beat San Francisco next week.

In Denver, Rich Karlis kicked three field goals, including a 28-yarder with 2:01 left, as the Denver Broncos snatched a two-game losing streak with a 16-13 victory over the San Diego Chargers.

The victory raised the Broncos' record to 12-3 and drew them into a first-place tie with Seattle, which beat the Cleveland Browns 24-17. In the first round of the tournament, BYU trounced Colorado State 76-61 behind Spaulding's 19 points.

ASU drops women cagers

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Junior guard Judy Rathbone converted two one-and-one free throw opportunities with a minute left to lift Arizona State to a 96-87 win over BYU and its fourth consecutive championship in the fifth annual Lady Sun Devils Dial Classic women's basketball tourney here Saturday night.

Colorado State's Lady Rams trounced Biola's Lady Eagles 73-38 in the consolation game.

BYU had won the title and the lead see-saw throughout the second half until the conversions by Rathbone, who finished with 22 points, 15 rebounds and 13 assists.

Sophomore forward Robin Connolly led ASU with 24 points. Sophomore Sherry Poole had 18, while senior Beckie Smatana added 11 points and 12 rebounds.

BYU was paced by sophomore center Tresa Spaulding, with 23 points and 10 rebounds. Cindy Battistone added 22 points, Jill Coleman had 17 and Karen Becken added 14.

In the first round of the tournament, BYU trounced Colorado State 76-61 behind Spaulding's 19 points.

Men gymnasts will take on Japanese team

The BYU men's gymnastics team will face some top competition Thursday and Friday in the Smith Fieldhouse when a Japanese all-star gymnastics team comes to BYU.

"I expect our gymnasts will be nervous because it's the first meet of the season," said BYU coach Wayne Young. "But I think individual competition should be very good."

Top performances are expected from Wendell Wetzel in the floor exercise and high bar, Robert Allen and Bob Chausaw in the pommel horse, Steve Johnson in the still rings and Bob Gauthier in the parallel bars, high bars and floor exercises.

Gauthier and Allen will be competing in all-around for the Cougars with Gauthier expected to have a good shot at the individual title.

Salary factor in A's trade

HOUSTON (AP) — It was a trade that probably never would have been made for baseball reasons. Oakland A's outfielder Rickey Henderson to the New York Yankees.

In return for Henderson, the A's got up-and-coming relief pitcher Jay Howell and four minor leaguers. But they also divested themselves of a $1 million salary.

Jazz waive John Drew for violating regulations

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Utah Jazz announced Saturday it had placed veteran forward John Drew on waivers two days after he was suspended indefinitely for violating team regulations.

The Jazz have arranged for Drew to enter a drug treatment facility under the auspices of the National Basketball Association, team President David Cawdron said in a written statement.

The action came two days after Drew was placed on indefinite suspension for violating team regulations. The suspension stemmed from Drew's failure to report to a team practice in the Oakland area during a road trip earlier this week. Drew was sent to Las Vegas on the road trip, but team officials have since said he is suspended without pay and comment further on the incident.

Cheekets said Drew's contract with the Jazz will be terminated Monday at 11 a.m. If no other NBA team picks up Drew, he has been averaging 16.2 points per game as a reserve forward this season.

The 6-foot-6 Drew underwent eight weeks of drug rehabilitation at a Maryland clinic two years ago after testing positive for cocaine and had been on probation for five years as a cocaine abuser.

Team officials have said Drew failed to arrive for the Oakland practice they thought concerned him had been held off drugs, but some have refused to elaborate.

Under the NBA's drug policy, any player convicted or pleading guilty to distributing heroin or cocaine, or found through testing to have used the drugs, is banned from the league for life. Players who voluntarily come forward, as Drew did in 1982, are suspended with pay and receive club funds for their rehabilitation. The second time a player comes forward, he is suspended without pay and given treatment.

Drew, a two-time NBA all-star, was obtained by the Jazz from the Atlanta Hawks in a trade. During the 1983-84 season he was instrumental in the club's first-ever appearance in the NBA playoffs, averaging 17.7 points per game as the team's sixth man.

Cards' hopes still alive as NFL enters last week

The St. Louis Cardinals, with a divisional show-down victory over the New York Giants, stayed alive in the NFC East race. The Pittsburgh Steelers and Cincinnati Bengals also won Sunday to keep the AFC Central a down-to-the-wire race as well.

Neil Lomax threw three touchdown passes and Otto Graham ran 12 yards for a touchdown for the tie-breaking score as the Cardinals beat the Giants 31-21. The result left both teams with 9-6 records with only one weekend left in the regular NFL football season.

In Pittsburgh, Gary Anderson kicked a 34-yard field goal with five seconds remaining, giving the Steelers a 22-20 victory over the Cleveland Browns and maintaining the Steelers' one-game lead over Cincinnati.

Ken Anderson got his first action in a month and threw for 191 yards and two touchdowns to keep the Bengals' playoff hopes alive with a 24-21 victory over the New Orleans Saints.

Mike Anderson, Philadelphia Eagles beat New England 27-17 to eliminate the Patriots from play-off contention in the AFC East and at the same time handed a wild-card berth to the defending Super Bowl champion Los Angeles Raiders. The Raiders play the Denver Broncos Monday night.

In a shocker, the Kansas City Chiefs swamped the Seattle Seahawks 34-7 and upset a playoff-bound team for the second week in a row. The Chiefs play Denver Sunday.

In other news, the AFC East champion Miami Dolphins defeated the Indianapolis Colts 34-17, the Green Bay Packers beat the Chicago Bears 20-14 and the Tampa Bay Buccaneers trimmed the Atlanta Falcons 20-17.

In games Saturday, the San Francisco 49ers crushed the Minnesota Vikings 51-7 behind Joe Montana's three touchdown passes and the New York Jets beat the Buffalo Bills 24-17 with Tony Pashos' 10-yard TD run in the fourth period.

The Eagles, who scored three touchdowns running all season, picked up three Sunday on two short sweeps by quarterback Joe Pisarcik and a 10-yarder by Wilbert Montgomery in their victory over the Packers.

Bill Kenney's pass shoddy Seattle defense for 312 yards as the revenge-minded Chiefs routed the Seahawks, who have already clinched a wild-card berth in the playoffs.

The Dolphins spotted Indianapolis a surprising 10-point halftime lead, then bore down on the Colts with four second-half touchdown passes by quarterback Dan Marino, who finished the game with 404 yards.

Third-string quarterback Rich Campbell's 43-yard touchdown pass to Phil Eppa with 34 seconds remaining lifted the Packers over the Bears, all but ending Chicago's hope of a home-field advantage in the playoffs.

Tampa Bay's James Wilder became the seventh man in NFL history to amass more than 2,000 total yards in a season, rushing for 125 yards and one touchdown to lead the Buccaneers over the Falcons.

Jazz preserve halftime lead to slip by KC Kings 123-120

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Reserve center Billy Pruitt sank a free throw with six seconds on the clock to preserve a 123-120 National Basketball Association victory for the Utah Jazz over the Kansas City Kings Sunday night.

The Jazz led 121-119 in the fourth quarter and were up 72-51 at intermission, but watched their lead dwindle to two points late in the fourth quarter.

Larry Drew carried a three-pointer with three seconds left to pull the Kings within two, 122-120, before Mark Olberding fouled Pruitt.

Pruitt missed the first of two shots, then hit the second to assure the Jazz their 11th victory of the season against 11 losses.

Adrian Dantley paced Utah with 38 points, while Darrell Griffith and Thurl Bailey added 24 each. Former University of Nevada-Las Vegas star Reggie Theus had 20 points, including 23 in the third half, as he returned to Las Vegas for the second time as a member of the Kings.

Utah head coach Frank Layden said he hates big leads at halftime. "The other team can sit out and play around and wonder what we're nothing to them. The players are good shooters that they bring a team back into it," Layden said.

"This was good for the crowd, good for the people listening on radio or watching TV. They probably turned on with it," Layden said. "But you can't do that in the NBA."

"The rules make it possible for a team to come back on you. You can always come back in the NBA."

Kings Coach Phil Johnson, formerly Layden's assistant at Utah, said Kansas City played well the second half, but, "Unfortunately, you have to play a better game in the fourth quarter."

"I think we came out and played the worst we have since I became coach."

Harkness, Craig win first annual Cougar Mixer tennis tourney

A new wrinkle was added to the BYU tennis calendar Friday with the first annual Cougar Mixer, a men's and women's doubles event featuring players from the BYU men's and women's teams.

Doug Harkness and Leslie Craig collected the winners' trophies by defeating Mike Codigan and Lynn Henderson 8-4 in the championship match.

BYU coaches Ann Valentine and Larry Hall said the tournament was played with such intensity and enthusiasm that it would be placed on their yearly schedule.

Y gymnasts set school point record

The BYU women's gymnastics team set a school record with 197 points in defeating Brigham Young School on Saturday in the first meet of the season for schools. The Bruino gymnasts scored 152.5 points.

"We were flirting with 180 points for two years now," said BYU coach Rodney Hill. "This was an extremely good opening meet for us. Everyone did well for us, and had nice in each event."

Cougar freshman Gina Hansen won both the free exercises and all-around events and placed second in vaulting.

"Gina had the only fall of the day and still scored 8.9 on the beam," Hill said. "Without the fall, she would have been 9.4 or 9.5."

BYU's Kim Smith placed third in the uneven bars, balanced beam and all-around.

"This was Jill's best collegiate meet," Hill said. "She was especially good on the floor."

Kim Peterson placed first in the vault and Linda Lee in the floor exercise.

Despite the Cougars' fine showing, Hill expects still better things later this season.

"We haven't begun to scratch the surface yet with what we can do," he said.

Henderson signs five-year deal with New York

HUDDLETON (AP) — The New York Yankees announced Saturday they had completed a trade for outfielder Rickey Henderson from the Oakland A's, making the Yankees one of the big winners in baseball's 1984 winter meetings.

The multi-player trade actually was proposed Wednesday, but was consummated Saturday only after New York agreed on a contract with Henderson.

Terms were not announced, but it was believed to be a six-trade, five-year deal worth more than $37 million with major portions deferred over 20 to 30 years.

In exchange for Henderson, minor league pitcher Bert Bradley and three others, the Yankees will send to Oakland right-hander Jay Howell, John Candelaria, Punk and Tim Birtas and outfielder Stan Javier.

"Rickey Henderson is a player of tremendous charisma and excitement," Yankees owner George Steinbrenner said in a statement. "He will really turn on the grass. New York Yankees fans, and we are really eager to put him in the lineup with our other players so he can just do that."

"It boiled down to business and what was best for both teams," said Henderson, 26, who is a major leaguer and will be 30 when he turns 30 in 1990.

Last season, Henderson batted .295 with 16 home runs, 58 runs batted in and 66 stolen bases.

The acquisition of Henderson then allowed the A's to send their relief ace Bill Cauffill to the Toronto Blue Jays in return for shortstop Alfredo Griffin, outfielder Dave Collins and cash.

"If the Henderson deal had not gone through, we were going to try to re-open negotiations with the A's anyway," said Toronto General Manager Pat Gillick.

Cougar comeback fails as SDSU wins match in 5 games

By SKIP VANCE
University Sports Writer

After splitting the first four games of the match, the BYU men's volleyball team fell to San Diego State 15-13 in the fifth game Friday night.

BYU had led the Aztecs 6-2 in the first game, leading the Aztecs 6-2. The Cougars showed signs of good serving and hit two aces while tallying six quick points.

The Aztecs, however, whittled the lead down to 6-6 before completely turning the tide on the Cougars. SDSU scored four straight points, taking the lead 6-8.

But it tied the game at nine and then took the lead at 10 with some good spikes by BYU's Jim Brinton. The game traded hands again with SDSU taking a 12-14 lead.

With SDSU needing one more point to win, BYU fought back to a 14-14 tie. Then SDSU took the Aztecs' serve, and SDSU won the game 14-16.

In game two BYU was no match for the Aztecs. SDSU came out smacking to a commanding 6-1 lead against the Cougars. BYU was able to pick themselves up, make the same nose scoring three unanswered points, making the game 6-4.

But an inability to get serves over the net and capitalize on the ones that did go over, four points were all the Cougars could score in the entire game and fell to SDSU 15-6.

"We started off real nervous," said BYU coach Tom Peterson.

In the third game, BYU was facing a must-win situation. They stayed in the game until it was tied out to a 5-5 lead and appeared to be in command.

However, the Cougars could not hold on to the lead as the black cloud of not capitalizing on serves cast a pall over them. SDSU scored four unanswered points on good offensive play bringing the score to 6-4.

The Aztecs took the lead in the game at 7-9, and BYU picked away at the score and tied it at 9, but BYU took the lead and fell again to 9-11.

BYU's Kevin Smith came into the game and got into the game with an excellent spike and good offensive play to help the team tie the game at 12-12.

With the game tied and BYU serving, Brad Hammer scored on a spike, giving the Cougars a one point lead. Still serving, BYU blocked two SDSU shots and won the game 15-12.

BYU surged into the fourth game and jumped on early with an open net spike and won an 8-1 lead. With good offensive play from Brinton, Smith and Leo Durkin, BYU kept a strong lead over the Aztecs. The closest SDSU got to BYU was 11-11 in the fifth game, but BYU won 15-13 — taking the match to a fifth and final game.

Just when things looked good for the Cougars, the plague struck again as they were unable to score and watched SDSU score five straight to take the lead 7-8.

At that point the game was back and forth in score and was tied up three different times. With the score 13-13, SDSU was going to make a comeback as Durkin score twice on a spike and once on a dink. However, with the score 12-12 fate struck again and left BYU with a 13-15 loss to the Aztecs in the final game.

The Cougars are now 0-2 this season.

Christmas can bring unnecessary stress

By KAREN E. HILL

University Staff Writer

The Christmas shopping air is filled with the sounds of happy children as they tear their way through a mountain of brightly wrapped gifts. It is Christmas morning.

Loving parents watch with happy hearts as all their efforts bear the fruits of a perfect Christmas. This joyful spirit is carried throughout the day as friends and family meet, exchange gifts and consume enormous amounts of food and drink.

Even strangers on the street are filled with the Christmas spirit. People greet each other with smiles and expressions such as "Merry Christmas."

Decorations, gift giving and family gatherings are the marks of the Christmas season, but for many, Christmas is not a happy time. People feel angry, frustrated or depressed because they are alone, too pressured or the expectations do not match unrealistic expectations of Christmas.

Christmas blues can turn this exciting season into an empty span of depression, fatigue, sleeplessness and anxiety.

The depression can strike almost every age group and situation. The elderly suffer from it, as do overworked homemakers, breadwinners and students.

Dr. Allen Jeppson, psychologist at the University of Utah, said depression at Christmas is not age related but generally strikes single people harder than others.

Many young adults are separated from loved ones during the holidays. They often feel left out of the excitement of the family-oriented season, he said.

Single parents also feel great frustrations when they can't provide the wealth of gifts that the advertisers insist children must have, added Jeppson.

Bette Johnson, a worker at Utah Social Services in Salt Lake City, said, "I think number one problem is realistic expectations." The poor of the state have trouble providing food and warmth for their children. They see the things television promotes and want to keep up with the latest Christmas dinners or gifts, said Johnson. Because of the frustration this causes, child abuse goes up at Christmas, she said.

Driven by the idea that she must provide a "perfect Christmas," many homemakers become depressed and exhausted, said Johnson. The breadwinner in the family wears himself out trying to provide all the gifts he feels are necessary to show his love for his family.

Overspending is another cause of depression. Too many spend a good part of the year paying for the gifts they gave, said Jeppson.

Excesses in eating or drinking also come with the depression. "Too often Christmas spirituality is lost in the gluttony, the commercialism, the gifts and entertainment," said Jeppson.

Even children become depressed when their Christmas expectations are not met. "Children if they expect an outrageous amount of gifts and don't get them, children often feel depressed after Christmas."

Many people will wait the entire year for the Christmas season, Jeppson said. "There are ways to overcome the Christmas depression if you are aware of the problem and prepare ahead of time."

He suggested several ways to make Christmas merrier. "First," he said, "try to remember the real meaning of Christmas and take the emphasis off the commercialism."

The gift of time could do much to lift the spirits of the lonely, aged or sick at Christmas time, Jeppson said. "Rather than spend the time alone, a phone call to a friend, a visit to a friend, and others in need."

Single adults should take the time to make the time more meaningful, said Jeppson. Arrange a party with friends, give yourself a special treat if you're not involved in the holiday, he suggested.

Parents should try and keep their children's expectations of Christmas reasonable.

Jeppson also recommended spreading the gifts out over several days. "Massive gift giving only results in a let down when the presents are all opened," said Jeppson. Gifts from grandparents and relatives could be given in the days following Christmas as the family visits.

To save money, ideas that are low in cost but high in enjoyment should be selected, said Jeppson. Taking a drive to see the Christmas lights or going caroling are enjoyable family activities.

Christmas blues can be reduced if people can keep their focus in the proper perspective and plan ahead to avoid problems, said Jeppson.

Students today aware of job market

By KAREN E. HILL

University Staff Writer

Students today are well aware of the job market and their place in it after graduation, said Wayne Hansen, director of the Placement Center.

Of the average graduating class, 25 percent go on to graduate school, 5 percent to 10 percent don't go on to college for a variety of reasons, 60 percent to 65 percent go directly into the job market, he said.

"Most students make wise choices when they decide on a major, but every year we have several hundred come into the center to make changes," he said.

Nation's most famous tree boasts up to 10,000 lights

NEW YORK (AP) —

Christmas trees come in all shapes and sizes, but this year's tree will be up to 10,000 lights, miles of wiring, some 2.5 million spectators and dedication.

"Christmas musical programs have been planned over the years to honor the community's traditional 'hometown' caroling in the village," said John C. Far Hills, N.J., and will be festooned with some 10 miles of lights, according to the Rockefeller Center spokesman.

Throw in some live animals, an 18-foot tall pageant, a 125-voice chorus singing Christmas carols, Broadway stars and nationwide television, and you've got the makings of a Rockefeller Center representative.

This year's tree — a 75-foot-tall Norway

Hansen added many of the students have lived away from home, been on missions or have traveled and know about the job market in other areas. This helps them to better understand career orientation.

Technical majors such as engineering or computer programming need to be decided on early. "If they don't decide quickly they end up taking five or six years to graduate," said Hansen.

John M. Lee Alkin, assistant director of the undergraduate business and education section of the Information Center at the University of Utah, said students realize jobs do not pay as much in Utah as in other states. "The pay isn't as much, but often the cost of living is also less. This compensates for low pay," he said.

Hansen added that students in the arts and humanities often feel they have plenty of time to decide on their major. "Sometimes they have more options than the technical majors."

Students should find the right job experience in their career, said Hansen. Employment is always easier, and the amount of pay increases more quickly if the graduate has some experience in the field.

"If the entry level pay seems low, an applicant should look about the company for raises," said Hansen. "Once you get a job, salary increases quickly once the employer has had a chance to see how the graduate handles his responsibilities."

Notes for the old whitebeard

As finals are upon us, many students are looking forward to the holidays. The smell of incense in the air, the scent of wassail coming from the dorms and the songs of carolers are reminders of Christmas.

For a time students and faculty will be able to put away the books, the lessons, the papers and the tests. Well, they may want to write one last letter. To many, a letter to Santa is as much a part of Christmas as decorating the tree. The Daily Universe obtained some of those letters.

Dear Santa,

We try to be good helpers at Christmas-time and have plenty of stock (well, we'll try). But — we have a Christmas list too.

1. The Text Department wants a crystal ball (you know, Santa, so they won't run out of text for a class again).

2. Accounting is asking for a 1985 of no bad checks.

3. The Photo Shop is asking you to give everyone on campus a roll of film to record Christmas. They'll give us a printout and we'll give them the film, and, of course, it would need developing and printing.)

4. School Supplies is asking you to give everyone their tickets for the faculty members who turned in their request forms for school, art, and engineering supplies.

5. And, of course, Book hopes you give them that wonderful present of records year — money (to buy books naturally).

Well, Santa, that's our list and while it may not be the most altruistic, we hope you'll be able to help us out.

The one wish, however, that we're sincerest by come from our collective 300 hearts is that the joy and peace of the Christmas season will be in our lives all year long.

Love always,
SANTA BOOKSTORE

Dear Santa,

This year all I want for Christmas is peace and quiet in the library. And please replace books destroyed last year by those silverfish. Silverfish which are attracted by the food students bring into the library.

Sterling Albrecht
University Librarian

Dear Santa,

We wish that each of our 217,693 alumni has a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. Sincerely,

Alumni Association

Dear Santa:

Dear Santa, I am a journalist and a die-hard breeder. I shouldn't write this letter until I've checked your credibility with my sources. But, there's nothing to lose so here's the letter. I'm enclosing a diagram of our heating system on ASBYU's fourth floor so we can find out what's really happening.

— A #1 football team every year it sells advertising.

— Readers who will understand the satire on the editorial page (no, the Bookstore did not have Miss Piggy).

— A sports editor who can double as a political reporter.

— Nachos in the Cougarcat that don't get soggy by the time I reach the newsroom.

— A red-tapeless administration that won't continue a "no comment" policy with its best information outlet.

— Coherent letters to the editor, even from the freshmen.

— If you can do all that, Santa, then I'll really believe.

Anne K. Thornton
Editor Daily Universe

Dear Santa Claus:

My list to you follows. (Don't bring these things down through the chimney though!)

1. An office in Hawaii.

2. Sixteen new bosses/advisors.
3. Positive "letters to the editor."
4. Better looking assistants.
5. More money with pay. (How about Jan. 1, 1985?)

6. Drive-in Hamburger and Fries Service in the Cougarcat, since Drive-ups are so overpriced.

7. Neon illuminated Dairy Store sign that can be seen from Las Vegas.

8. Christmas bonus and a bone for my dog.

9. No more Budget reports.

10. Shorter meetings.

Sam Brooks,
Director of Food Services

Dear Santa,

Our request for Christmas is 50 million new parking spaces and "speed-writer" pens for our traffic officers.

Sincerely, University Police

Dear Santa,

We at Physical Plant, only have a couple of "small" Christmas wishes:

First, we would like to encourage the maintenance department to eliminate all of our heating problems.

Second, we would like a band on snow until at least July 15, then, of course, it would be nice to stick.

Last of all, but most important, we wish the computer would "accidentally" make an error and transfer all physical plant funds to our bank account. Since we are continually transferring funds, this error should be quite easy to arrive at.

Merry Christmas, Santa!

The Physical Plant Department
Harold Anderson, Director

Dear Santa,

Please send Bryant Gumble a BYU No. 1 sweatshirt and have him wear it on the 21st of December.

Thanks,

Ron Miller, ASBYU President

Fruitcake is a perfect gift for the holidays

CLANTON, AL (AP) — Fruitcake has become a part of America's Christmas celebration, symbolizing family, fellowship and high spirits.

"There's a holiday connotation," says Jim Parker, manager of Clanton Bakery Inc. "People give gifts, and fruitcake is a perfect gift item."

Yule traditions — Holland style

By JONATHAN AIKELE

Utah Staff Writer

Her life is as full as anyone's could possibly be — as the president and first counselor in The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints General Young Women's Presidency, Patricia Terry Holland still finds time for Christmas shopping.

Sister Holland, the native of a small farm in Enterprise, Utah, once dreamed of being a concert pianist, even of the point of studying under a member of the faculty at the Juilliard School of Music in New York City, but she gave it up for a more important career:

Sister Patricia Holland discusses what Christmas means to her family and shares some of their traditions for this year.

"I never even dreamed of the life I have now, but I'm certainly not disappointed with it," said Sister Holland. Becoming a professional musician became less attractive as her dreams changed to that of being a wife and mother.

"My philosophy is that marriage is full time. I'm happier now than I would have been had I chosen music as a career," she said.

Sister Holland explains that her and her family's idea of Christmas is "that the spirit of Christmas should be in our hearts throughout the whole year. This is what we try to teach our children."

With her many activities, Sister Holland makes time to spend with her three children. Her position in the Young Women's presidency requires her to commute to Salt Lake City three or four days a week and travel out of town once or twice a month. When she does travel to Salt Lake City she drops her children off at school and picks them up usually before they come home from school.

She said, "We agreed each time I had to leave the family for a week to fly off to a conference or something, I would take one of my children along. That way, the other two would travel to the trip instead of feeling bad because I had to leave." The cost for the family to travel along is at the expense of the荷lands.

"Christmas is family, home and hearth," she said. "My husband and I work very hard to make it a reflective time, a giving time and a strengthening time. People should not feel guilty because they have given a gift of time during the year, but they should reflect all the good they have done for the service; have rendered and the commitment they have made to others. It is a time to set new goals and make new resolutions, but also to reflect on the past, both in personal and public ways.

"We try to make these same kind of commitments other times than just on Christmas," said Sister Holland. "The most creative home money comes in when we begin to discuss just what matters most — where our values are and how we can have true joy." What matters most to the Hollands is charity. "To experience true growth one needs to love and be loved for if he has not, charity is his reward."

On Christmas Eve the Hollands have a traditional Christmas meal. "One year my husband and I dressed up, we had our finest crystal, nice china and silverware. We had a special place setting for very important guests coming," she said. "When it was time for dinner, my husband took them outside and brought them in the front door. I greeted them and said, 'You are our most important guests.'"

On Christmas morning the Holland children congregate in the parents' room and encourage Mom and Dad to get the day going. "We always begin the day with a family prayer, which my husband always offers," said Sister Holland. "We want to make sure Christmas Day is Christ-oriented."

After they give each member of the family a Christmas present, they also give a second gift to each other which has little or no monetary value.

The second gift is a poem or speech, written between the receiver and the giver. Often, these presents are saved to be opened last and are usually the most meaningful.

Another of the Holland Christmas traditions began when they lived in Connecticut. Sister Holland said, "I remember, finances were limited and even though we had a tree we did not have the ornaments. So we would make gingerbread cookies and we would hang them as our ornaments." From that year on it has been one of their traditions.

This year because of her busy schedule Sister Holland decided to have her family have a traditional meal at a restaurant. "It is something we have made for the Hollands for years," she said. "The food is something we have made for the Hollands for years."

"We feel very strongly that the family comes first — before anything else. So it looks like the tradition of gingerbread cookies will continue as a tradition in our family."

Kids may get computers from St. Nick

Some people have an unusual gift for the toddler of the house this Christmas — a micro-computer.

And that can be a 3-year-old learn from a computer?

According to some experts, a preschooler can make much use of a special home software program as a high school senior or college student.

Industry sources say the number of software programs available for children of all ages has more than doubled since last Christmas, and the problem for parents is deciding where to begin and what to buy.

There are pitfalls to be avoided.

"Don't rush your preschooler" is one bit of advice heard frequently.

Christmas observed in Israel

Small minority of Christians
celebrate holiday

By TIM CHAVEZ
University Staff Writer

Christmas in the Holy Land. For many Christians in Jerusalem, Christ's birthday is a time of homage and almost subdued festivity. In their ranks total a small minority in the estimated 1.5 million in Nazareth and Bethlehem can decorate Christmas trees, Santa Claus or artificiality by law allows them.

Israel, which gained control of all of the Holy Land during the 1967 Arab-Israeli war, is dominated by Jews and Moslems.

With a population of 400,000, Jerusalem has only 12,000 Christians.

The Christian community is split into more than 35 denominations, many of which are in long-standing conflict with each other over privileges in Christendom's holy shrines, which is a measure of power and prestige.

Most Christians in the Middle East belong to Eastern Orthodox churches, which split from Rome during the fifth century.

The church follows its Julian calendar and celebrate Christmas on Jan. 7, said Ehab Abunwara, a sophomore from Nazareth majoring in psychology.

The majority of Christians in the Jerusalem area belong to three main religious sects — Greek Orthodox, Roman Catholic and Armenian — each of which celebrates Christmas in its own way.

"There are about 50,000 Christians residing in Bethlehem, half of whom are Greek Orthodox Christians. Towering above the town is the massive Church of the Nativity, which many believe was built on the site of the Savior's birth some 200 years ago."

On Christmas Eve Bethlehem takes on a festive air fitting a town of such religious significance. People go to the Church of the Nativity for church services. Inside the church, ancient lanterns, icons and ornaments shimmer in preparation for one of the year's biggest ceremonies.

The Roman Catholic Mass is held on Dec. 24, while Armenians and Greek Orthodox Christians wait two weeks till Jan. 6," said Haws Marble, promotion manager for the Jerusalem Center program.

Up to 50,000 people crowd into Manger Square in Bethlehem, where a 30-foot Christmas tree adorns the parking lot. International choirs sing to the thousands of Bells of Bethlehem chime Christmas night with peals of music that are broadcast around the world. Thousands of people come to the city each Christmas to visit where the Savior was born.

pilgrims gathered at the site of the first Christmas. "There are so many travelers who get into Bethlehem that it's a pass to get through all the security," said Anisie Hanania, a graduate student from Jerusalem.

"Most of the celebrants are local Palestinians, but the town draws in a lot of followers from outside the area," said Martin.

In addition to the services, most prominent religious services, there are several others. Protestants hold an open-air service about one mile from Bethlehem in an olive grove thought to be the field where the shepherds heard the angels sing the star above Jesus' manger. On Christmas Eve, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints holds an outdoor fireside service in Shepherd's Field, located in the hill overlooking Bethlehem. "A similar service is repeated on April 6," said

Abunwara. "The feeling of Christmas is not as widespread in Jerusalem as it is in this country," said Hanana. "It is not nearly as commercialized, and because of the heavy Jewish influence, decorations are only in the stores."

Hanana, who is a descendent of one of the 10 oldest families in Jerusalem, follows a long line of Greek Orthodox tradition. "My family eats a Christmas dinner consisting of Armenian dishes such as rice, key-lamb, rice, gefilte fish, vegetables and various sweets. This is much as in Western cultures," she said.

"When I was growing up in Nazareth, I went to a Baptist school, because all of the schools are run by churches. Each year we would have Christmas plays at school, and I would have the chance to participate in one each year."

Brothers cash in on graffiti

LOS ANGELES (AP) — For most people, graffiti is a nuisance, but for Tim and Michael Sullivan the painted scrawls on walls and buildings spell money in the bank. They get paid for painting over it.

"It's a pretty good living," said Tim, 37, who co-owns Graffiti Removal with his brother Michael, 32. "It's been good to us because every city we get, into shape builds our reputation and earns us another city."

This year the company is expected to take in $300,000, about 10 times more than in 1976, its first year.

Its customers, small municipalities in the Los Angeles area, find it cheaper to use than city workers.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA used balloons to float some of its Nicaraguan rebel manuals over the Sandinista-controlled nation apparently in a bid to scare government leaders there, administration officials say.

The manual contains advice on the "selective use of violence" to "uproot" Nicaraguan officials, the U.S. officials said. The balloon drop was aimed at scaring the leftist government.

Christmas celebrations differ around the world

By JONETTE UDARBE
Senior Reporter

Christmas is a worldwide celebration. While not everyone celebrates with Christmas trees, mistletoe and Santa Claus, most countries conduct some kind of festivities marking the event.

In Switzerland, Dec. 25 is a big day for the children. "We don't have stockings," said Corinne Baumann, of Switzerland. Instead, children put out mountain climbing shoes and Saint Nicholas fills these with fruit and nuts.

Christmas is celebrated on the 24th with the opening of gifts. "There are not as many gifts given, but they are more personal," said Baumann. "Also, it is not Santa Claus who gives gifts to the Christ Child. The children are the Christ Child as an angel who has been living with Christ."

Christmas trees glow in Swiss homes, but candles are used instead of lights.

As American families are feasting on turkey and ham, families in Switzerland are also eating foods prepared especially for the occasion.

"The Christmas food is tongue and sauerkraut," said Baumann.

Half way around the world, people in the far East celebrate Christmas in an American fashion. "Hong Kong has become a westernized port," said Richard Kwok, a BYU student from Hong Kong. "We have Christmas trees, gifts and carolers. The trees also have stockings and believe in Santa Claus."

A major difference Kwok noted is that they eat on Christmas day. "We don't eat turkey, but we eat our regular food."

Ryne Richards, of Japan, said Christmas is almost as commercially successful, but not religiously. With the majority being Buddhist or Shinto, the Christianity is not really celebrated, and it is not a national holiday. The children go to school on the 25th, though the winter holiday starts on the 22nd.

In Latin America Christmas activities begin at midnight. Caroline Edwards, of Ecuador, said everyone gathers around midnight, attends a church service, opens gifts and then goes to bed.

The tradition of Christmas tree lights and Santa Claus known as "Papa Noel" are celebrated in Ecuador, but Endira said there are no stockings.

People used to carve little figures of the stable — Mary, Joseph and Jesus out of wood," reminisced Francisco Impronta, of Venezuela. He also said the young people used to go roller skating on the streets during Christmas.

Different from American customs are the food and songs. "We eat rice and beans which is eaten with cornflower, chicken and pork. We also like to sing special Christmas songs that are different from those here."

In Oberndorf, Austria, people gather around the Silent Night Chapel in commemoration of the song "Silent Night," which was first played on Dec. 24, 1818.

Another German tradition is the firing of pistols to scare away the evil spirits. "The men dress up in traditional costumes, and they use guns loaded down with gunpowder," said Debbie Smith, of Germany. "I remember hearing the gun shots go off."

For the majority of South Africans, Christmas is a lightly celebrated event. "They don't have Christmas trees. Instead, they might have a branch hanging down from the ceiling," said Scott Smith.

Christmas cards a status symbol

By JOJI MARDESCICH
University Staff Writer

The sending of Christmas cards is not just a friendly tradition but has led to a new social status, according to a BYU professor.

During the Christmas season of 1974, Phillip Kunz, a sociology professor, received over 100 Christmas cards. He had never received so many. Ten years later, he still receives cards from some of them.

The original cards were sent as a result of a program in which Kunz sent 600 cards to people he randomly selected from the Folk Directory. He chose half the people from Omaha, Neb., and the other half from Waterbury, S.D., for his study.

Kunz sent three different kinds of cards to measure the effect of their quality. There were nice, moderately expensive cards, "medium rate" cards and "tacky" cards. Half the cards were sent to "blue-collar" workers and half to professionals.

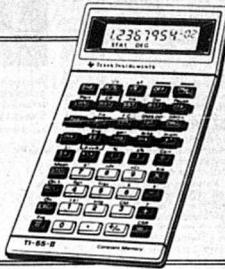

Kunz signed half of each of the three types of cards "Dr. and Mrs. Phillip Kunz," and half were signed "Phil, Joyce, Jay, Jenifer, Jody, Jonathan." Some of them had once known the sender but may have forgotten him and chose to let the relationship remain.

The record for length was a hand written letter of four pages, Kunz said. It closed with, "It has been a long four years since we saw you."

He also found that letting a young boy keep the recipient family was to renew their old friendship and that they were traveling west on vacation.

Symbols mark holidays

By JONETTE UDARBE

Senior Reporter

The world's birth stands unparalleled to any other event at Christmas time. But entwined with the commemoration of this sacred event are lighted trees, glittering decorations, carols, holly and Santa Claus.

The symbols of Christmas are an important part of the celebration we call Christmas today, young and old participate in the traditional merrymaking and festivities of Christmastide.

The celebration of Christmas is one of the most important dates in the Christian year as it marks the anniversary of the birth of Jesus Christ.

Christmas has traditionally known in Roman and Anglican churches as the "Vigil of Our Blessed Lord Jesus." It was a time of welcoming in Christmas. Carols, originally sung by night watchmen, were sung that night and candles were placed in windows.

The day was not originally celebrated because Christian churches condemned birthdays and human cults. During the Puritan era in England, Christmas was forbidden for a time. In 1644 a law ordered stores to open their doors on the 25th, and it became a public holiday.

In Massachusetts, a law was passed in 1659 that made it a penal offense to observe Christmas. Both laws were later repealed. However, it took years to recognize Christmas.

In foreign lands, Christmas was celebrated in the fifth and sixth centuries. In Bethlehem, Constantine built a church on the birthplace of Christ. It was destroyed and later rebuilt. Various congregations held services and ceremonies reliving Christ's birth each year in the church.

The legend of Santa Claus, originally known as St. Nicholas, has survived from German legends.

The story is told how St. Nicholas first gave gifts to children who had no parents because their father could not provide a dowry for them. Late one evening he filled three bags of gold and tossed them into the young woman's room. His gift was a three happy marriage. Thereafter, secret presents were attributed to St. Nicholas.

The legendary belief that Santa Claus comes down a chimney originated from the Norsemen. It is written in their legend

Among the traditions of Christmas, the displaying of the nativity scene is accepted and acknowledged by Christians the world over. Christmas is traditionally known in the Roman and Anglican churches as the "Vigil of Our Blessed Lord Jesus."

that the goddess Hritha appeared in fire places during the winter solstice and brought good tidings.

Fifteen reindeer, a sleigh for gifts and sleigh bells were created by Dr. Clement Clarke Moore, a professor in the General Theological Seminary, in New York in 1822. He wrote a poem titled "The Night Before Christmas" which became famous in the famous poem, "The Visit of St. Nicholas" (more famous as "The Night Before Christmas").

With the belief in Santa Claus came the questioning of his reality also. In 1867, a little girl called Virginia wrote to the New York Sun asking whether a Santa Claus existed. The editor had her family name figure in the famous poem, "The Visit of St. Nicholas" (more famous as "The Night Before Christmas").

The United States recognized this tradition with the introduction of cards by the Marcus Ward & Company of London in 1870. Ten years later a Boston company competed for the Christmas card business, and the trade was established.

Utilities plan $84 million for cleanup

WASHINGTON (AP)—Pennsylvania and New Jersey utility companies will contribute up to $84 million to the Three Mile Island cleanup in the next six years, using money already scheduled for research and at no additional cost to customers.

An Associated Press story on Thursday did not make clear that the contributions would come from debts already scheduled to be paid to an industry research institute and would not involve added costs to consumers.

Japanese agree to cut steel exports

Japanese steelmakers said yesterday they would reduce production by an agreement cutting their exports to the United States, although the U.S. official said no final agreement had yet been reached.

A Japanese panel was told, meanwhile, that the United States has been "out-organized, out-financed, out-managed" by its trade competitors, and that greater cooperation is needed among federal, state and local governments to promote exports.

Christmas increases business

Opinions differ on the commercial aspect of the season

By JONETTE UDARBE

Senior Reporter

From the time Macey's windows light up after the Thanksgiving day parade, stores throughout the nation begin their full Christmas rush.

For most businesses, the holiday season is a profitable time period, and business owners hum a merry tune as they watch an increase in the cash flow.

For consumers, the four-week buying season is a time of sales, crowds, numerous Santa appearances and muffled Christmas music over the intercom.

Many retailers attribute the increased business to advertising and giving gifts at Christmas time. Some consumers, however, view the increased advertising, anxious sales pitches and demonstrations as commercial exploitation of Christmas.

Despite the concern of over-commercialization, the facts show stores are buying more during this season, advertising is heightened in an attempt to meet consumers' needs and draw them away from the competition, and business profits have risen substantially. Year after year the cycle continues.

Retailers begin preparing for the Christmas season months in advance. Managers plan advertising campaigns, order and stock extra merchandise, hire temporary help and rearrange shelves in an effort to make their Christmas season most profitable.

"We plan for Christmas all year," said Bob Reiter, manager of ZCMI. "We start training in October because our products require employee expertise to educate the consumer."

Hiring extra staff is also a part of holiday business preparation. "We have employed about 150 people since the last of October," said ZCMI's wrapped paper, said Heber Lloyd, manager of ZCMI.

The University Mall hires extra security staff and do most stores and increases their public services personnel. Parking is also planned. "We try to become accustomed to the crowd and anticipate the problems," said University Mall manager C. Robert Kallaf.

Advertising is a big part of the Christmas scene. Additional catalogs, brochures and flyers fight for media attention. "We really pack our merchandising this time of the year," said Lloyd.

Likewise, in-store advertising, displays and decorations are planned to keep shopping attention and attract the consumer with a cheery scene. The mall employs their full-time staff to do the decorating. Kallaf said they start early enough to have it completed by the Thanksgiving weekend.

At the ZCMI, advertising goes as little as possible before Thanksgiving, but all advertising and decorating are culminated Thanksgiving weekend.

Extending shopping hours is also a business tradition at Christmas time. This year only accommodates shopping and increases business profits. Kallaf said this service is for those who are not normally engaged in shopping, such as busbands. It is also a great benefit for retailers.

The ZCMI extends its hours (from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.) from store employees, but the owners don't complain because of the increased business, Kallaf said.

Lloyd said the extension of hours is "absolutely profitable. It's hard on the employees, and we're sorry, but they are on commission and make up for this problem."

With the combination of increased advertising and promotions, grocery shoppers, it is no wonder to note a 10 percent increase in sales. Kallaf said nationwide, most stores receive one-fourth to one-third of their annual sales during December. Lloyd commented this, reporting his store received approximately one-third of its sales between Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Likewise, Mrs. Fields cookies sales go up 50 percent during the holidays. "During the Christmas season we sell $1 million to $1.5 million worth, and normally our sales range between $600 and $700," said Kim Harwell, manager of Mrs. Fields in University Mall.

Most retailers do not view the season as a time to exploit Christmas by their increased business activities. Their goal is to please the consumer and help make their shopping experience a pleasant one.

Many retailers add a flair of Christmas spirit by setting up Christmas trees, displaying their stores in bright colors and displaying Christmas scenes. They also add extra attractions such as puppet shows, musical performances and Santa Claus appearances.

Employees are also encouraged to reflect the Christmas spirit in their actions. Managers encourage them to be warm and courteous despite long hours, lured shoppers and increased demands.

In viewing Christmas commercials, Kallaf said the best and most retailers are able to see the commercial side from the true meaning of Christmas. "It breaks Christmas down into two divisions. The breaks Christmas attitude of giving goes along with the religious aspect of it," he said. "The pomp and pageantry of Santa are the fun things that support the season."

"Almost everyone accepts the giving of gifts as a tradition. Obviously, to give gifts one has to buy them. Retailers do what they can to make sure the public knows they have the goods and services they need," Kallaf said.

"We see a lot of people buying gifts with love and concern; they are the last minute buyers that fit into the category of commercialism," he said. "The trend is to be in a hurry to shop at the last minute, and as a result they get short-tempered. Shopping a little early isn't as serious as we might think. Those who start early have the least amount of stress."

Reitz believes Christmas has become too commercialized but said it "goes back to the 40-50 percent business." Retailers have not necessarily made it commercial, consumers have because of the added business they bring.

BYU Communications professor Emerald Jerome said it is an age-old problem as to whether Christmas has been commercialized and continuing on Christmas or whether the merchant creates the commercialized environment through increased buying. "It's the chicken and the egg theory," he said.

He added, "In general, business management professor, said: 'Business is business. It is not an intentional effort to cheapen Christmas. This time of year provides a systematic fashion of buying gifts because it has been a tradition and continues through pre-Christmas activities. Jerome said most merchants prefer to start after Thanksgiving, but it is a system of ethics that guides them. 'It is not that we have not sold out of Christmas,' he said. 'It is starting too early,' he said. 'Most high-standing merchants do not promote until Thanksgiving.'"

In order to make Christmas a truly Christian holiday, Jerome said a united effort would need to be made on behalf of all Christians to move the celebration of Christmas to the proper time of the year, which is in the spring.

"We could celebrate the 25th as gift giving based on Saint Nicholas. 'Christ's birth, death and resurrection have been celebrated without the commercialism,' he said. 'We could celebrate gift giving to the Lord.'

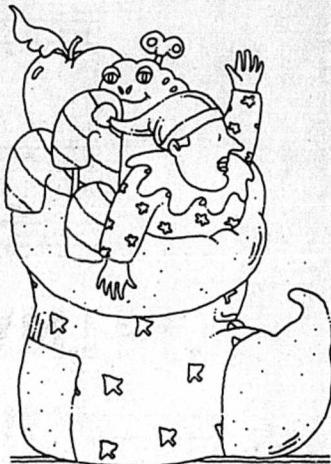

Without such measures, "we will never end the commercialism of Christmas. We cannot blame others. We are all part of the same problem, and we can be part of the same solution," said Jerome.

Robot use on the rise

WASHINGTON (AP) Production of industrial robots jumped sharply in the United States this year, industry leaders said Thursday.

Japan continues to maintain a wide lead in using robots in industries, but the United States is making progress and has better technology.
